Striking a Balance

An outgrowth of the HCPC's Planning For Prosperity initiative, the on-going forum series started in 2004.

A rapid increase in land development in Hancock County spurred the creation of this series. Organizers hope that the series will lead to:

- ✓ Increased Awareness of Subdivision Review Standards and State Regulations that Affect Land Development
- ✓ Greater Understanding of the Importance of Watershed-wide Planning
- ✓ Implementation of Planning Tools & Wise Development Practices
- ✓ Constructive Dialogue Among Municipal and State Officials, Conservation Groups and Those in the Development/Construction Industry

Some Energy Facts & Trends

- There are currently 62 Brownfields projects in Maine, totaling 786 acres of land returned to better and higher uses.
- Maine has Brownfields projects in its major cities (Portland, Lewiston, Brewer, Brunswick), but also has numerous projects in small rural communities such as China, Roxbury, Bradley, Peru, and Castine.
- A preliminary list by the DEP indicates that there are 86 potential brownfields sites in Hancock County.
- For every dollar of federal Brownfields funding invested in projects, over nine dollars of private funding are spent in cleanup and redevelopment.
- The Hancock County Planning Commission has received a grant to hire an environmental consultant to conduct site assessments and prepare clean-up plans for a limited number of brownfields sites.
- Studies have shown that 10.4 jobs are created for each acre of Brownfields property redeveloped.
- There are numerous federal and state resources available to aid in the assessment and cleanup of contamination at Brownfields properties.
